

Claims

What is claimed is:

1. A method for scheduling call consultations, comprising:
receiving an electronic request from a first participant for one or more on call 5 dates;
assigning one or more on call dates to said participant; and notifying potential callers of said first participant's on call dates and qualifications.
2. A method as in claim 1, further comprising receiving electronic feedback information from one or more callers who have called said first participant during said one 10 or more assigned on call dates; and recording said feedback information in an electronic database.
3. A method as in claim 1, further comprising assigning said participant to a group associated with a topic, and wherein a potential caller does not have access to contact information for said participant unless said potential caller has indicated an interest 15 in said topic.
4. A method as in claim 3, wherein said interest is indicated by said potential caller requesting to speak with a associated with said topic.
5. A method as in claim 3, wherein said interest is indicated by said potential caller attending one or more events associated with said topic.
- 20 6. A method as in claim 3, wherein said interest is indicated by said potential caller downloading one or more publications related to said topic.
7. A method as in claim 2, further comprising:
associating said participant with a topic, wherein a predetermined number of callers have expressed interest in said topic, 25 and wherein said participant has received positive feedback for one or more calls related to said topic; and transmitting an electronic invitation to said participant to request an on call date relating to said topic.